HOAGLAND'S
NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER
HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive
Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.
He respectfully refers to the following
CARD.
Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. E. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used
It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is consequently safe and secure.
It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

Grace Greenwood's Little Pilgrim has been sold out to be Little Corporal, the popular youth's magazine of Chicago.

The New Orleans Times expresses unbounded astonishment that Henry S Foote was a member of the Memphis convention and did not speak

The three women's rights publications in Chicago are to be united and published under the modest title of The Universe. It will be an eight page sheet.

A Tide Land Reclamation Company, with a nominal capital of $12,000,000, has been formed for the purpose of reclaiming overflowed lands, particularly Andrus Island, Twitchell Island and Brannan Island in the Sacramento river.

Senator Wilson is now engaged in writing a history of the part which Congress played in the war to suppress the rebellion. The work will be in two volumes. The first volume the writer intends to put to press by the first of next year. He expects to occupy two years in composing both volumes, which will contain some twelve hundred pages.

The town of Wadsworth, Nevada, is claimed by three counties—Washoe, Lyon and Storey. The citizens of that place have paid their taxes in Washoe county, but a recent survey shows that a major part of it lies in Storey county. Washoe county will therefore be forced to refund. Should Wadsworth ever have a city government it will be a very mixed concern.

Quite an extensive task is undertaken by a society in Springfield, Illinois, which proposes to form a collection of all books, pamphlets, and newspaper and magazine articles, relating to President Lincoln and the war. It is the intention to deposit them in a room in the foundation of the Lincoln monument; but it must be a large room to contain them all.

John A. Andrews, who was one of the leaders in the draft riot in New York in 1863, and was sent to the State prison for three years for that offence, tried to defend a person in the New York Court of Special Sessions recently, but Judge Dowling summarily put him down, telling him that he could not practice in that court. Andrews tried to explain, but the judge would not hear a word of his explanation.

A sugar planter at the Hawaiian Islands adopted, in 1860, a new way to raise the wind and to make the clouds drop rain. Having a large quantity of arid land and no streams within reach, he set his wits to work to bring the moisture from the mountain down on to his plantation. For this purpose he planted 50,000 forest trees, which, under his care, grew rapidly. Soon the clouds hung over the new forest and the rain came down abundantly.

A Washington special says: The Conservatives of Tennessee are waiting the result of overtures involving an abandonment of the disfranchisement programme, which have been made by Dewitt C. Senter, the Brownlow candidate for Governor against Stokes. Strange to say Mr. Brownlow has been at the bottom of these overtures. Senator Fowler and Congressman Prosser support Senter and also support a policy of which the result will be an enlargement of the suffrage.

Gen. Quincy A. Gilmore has been ordered to Savannah to superintend repairs upon Fort Pulaski. Gen Gilmore is the man who bombarded the fort, and almost destroyed it, on the 10th and 11th of April, 1862. The work was 15 years in building, its walls contained over 13,000,000 bricks; and it cost $1,000,000. The Savannah News thinks it will be useless to repair the fort. "The missiles from the rifled cannon of Gilmore crashed through its walls, although seven and a half feet thick, with almost as much ease as a rifle bullet could be shot through butter, and the rifled gun of to-day is much more powerful than those whose penetrative power created so much astonishment in 1862."

Corcoran, the Banker.

We have not many of these princely fellows who give away a million at a handful. It is worth while to look after their blood and bearing a little. Corcoran now grows upward in the sixties somewhere. He says in his letter of yesterday to the directors, that he can't postpone much what he has to do in these matters of public charities. He is the son of an Irish shoemaker, I am told, who seventy years ago kept his shop in Georgetown. As a boy, young Corcoran stood sometimes behind the counter. There he grew up to be a likely young fellow and wanted to set up some kind of business for himself, and quit the shoe shop. The moneyed neighbors believed in him and helped him along.

As he was succeeding in business he married a Miss Morris, a daughter of the old Commodore of that name, and she brought him more money than he's.

In the days of the old National Bank, under Robert J. Walker, as Secretary of the Treasury, he became an agent for the sale of government securities, in some manner analogous to that of the banking house of the Cookes, in the late war. From this and other transactions he grew to bounteous wealth, and the name of the richest man in the District of Columbia. His wealth he employed generously for himself and others. He owned a bundant property. He bought one or two magnificent estates just beyond the limits, in the environs of the city, and fitted them up like a feudal lord. The environs of Washington are the most magnificent in the world—but perhaps this is to be discovered yet.

Anyhow, "Corcoran's Farm" is the famous drive about Washington still, though the city was torn from its Gothic gates, and its splendid vegetation sadly tampered with by soldiers here in war time.

Corcoran has always borne himself well here, showing none of that niggard stinginess which so often empties a man's soul while he is filling his pockets. He has been generous to the poor and princely with the public. If he were not held accountable in the popular mind for sympathies with the South during the war, Peabody would not outrank him to-day as a generous giver and public benefactor. Perhaps in the end the New England philanthropist will not overtop the Southerner. But political differences aside. The charities of men like these to their fellows are things that commence back of States and go further—belong to humanity.

They are colossal monuments to unselfishness, whose summits tower up to the high water mark of man's nobility and destiny. When he has given to the public, Corcoran has given generously, avoiding those vexing reservations to personal whim which take away the flavor and usefulness of so many pretended public benefactions. Years ago he donated to the city of Georgetown its famous cemetery, and only the other day drove through its gates and received insult from its keeper, with no greater redress than the merest stockholder. The gift of the Art Building or a deed in fee simple to the city, put in the hands of directors, reserving only a right to the public to enter at least on certain days without paying a price. On Christmas and other holidays in the old times, before the war, the inmates of the Infirmary and other institutions of public charity here, as now always for a feast out of the rich man's purse. If this man was disloyal in heart to his country certainly such charity as this may be allowed to cover a multitude of sins.

An old citizen and contemporary of Corcoran tells me an episode of his early life, illustrating his character. Commencing business, Corcoran borrowed five thousand dollars, giving his note, endorsed by a Mr Whitney, a rich man here then. He failed in ability to meet the obligation, and his friend suffered the loss. Years afterward, Whitney was dead, his widow poor, and Corcoran had commenced prosperity. Mrs Whitney l

Dr. Thomas C. Durant.

THE NAPOLEON AMONG RAILROAD BUILDERS

A. D. Richardson, who is writing letters to the Tribune along the line of the Union Pacific Railway, thus describes Dr. Durant:

Meanwhile, one of the most marked, original characters of all this throng is one of the quietest and least noticeable. There he sits, chatting carelessly in low tones, a rather full man, in middle life, his hair and whiskers beginning to show streaks of gray, and his worn, mild, thoughtful face shaded by the limp brim of a low-crowned brown hat. It is Thomas C. Durant, manager and builder of the Union Pacific Railroad. In the Central Pacific Company—covering the California end of the line—three officers, Stanford, Crocker and Huntington, have shared the responsibility and work; in the Union Pacific, Durant had energetic, persevering associates, but he has been the motive power—has borne the brunt of everything.

He was born among the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts. He studied medicine and graduated at Albany; and tried to content himself as a practicing physician; but with no other vent than feeling pulses and writing prescriptions, his inborn, restless energy would have left him no peace. He became the head of a heavy firm for transporting freight from New York to the West. It often carried supplies for new railway companies, taking their securities in payment. Negotiating these bonds familiarized him with the stock market. Then he got to building roads himself, taking enormous contracts, pushing forward the work and selling the bonds—making fast friends and bitter enemies—and becoming widely known as a contractor and operator.

In the early doubtful years of the war he went into the Union Pacific Company. His first step was to spend several months in inducing Congress to change the law, and make the government lien only a second mortgage upon the road, that the company might issue its own bonds as a first mortgage. Even after this was done, his Eastern associates lacked faith in the enterprise. But his whole soul was thrown into it; and he furnished from his private means a large portion of the first resources. He believed in the nation, in the West, in a Pacific Railway. "The fact was," he explains when asked about it, "I had built roads before over the prairies in advance of settlements, and I knew how they bring population and make business from the very outset."

It was hard study. Even after the money was raised labor could hardly be found. "The boys" were all in the war. But men were [illegible] up in Canada, in New England, in Pennsylvania, and sent forward fifteen hundred miles at the company's expense. And the number kept increasing till at one time 18,000 laborers were employed.

After two or three hundred miles were finished, Durant's associates began to see that there were great profits both in the construction and in the traffic. Fierce struggles arose in the Company—regular Wilderness battles, all of which he saw and part of which he was. There were men who declared his recklessness and extravagance would ruin everything—that he was unfit to manage a ward corporation—but I never heard of one who after a conflict with him, disparaged his ability.

Things were upon a grand scale. Enormous sessions were sent out on a grand scale from the East over the line in palace cars, with a sumptuous regardlessness of expense. The offices of the company were among the most elegant in New York. Brussels carpets, and [illegible] walnut and marble counters, the [illegible] of the partners, rare [illegible] Dr. Durant's [illegible] Dr. Durant's houses were the [illegible] Central Park, and his yacht was the [illegible] of the New York Yacht Club. [illegible] him on [illegible] a party of ladies [illegible] the [illegible] through-out as [illegible] as if he had not a [illegible] beyond the comfort of his [illegible] one o'clock may nonchalantly, "Well, I [illegible] go ashore; I have a [illegible] to pay before three o'clock. Have [illegible] all out, and don't return till you get ready."

Meanwhile he was working like a galley slave. Sometimes he was hardly in bed for

THE CAPITAL STOCK
—OF—
THE PACIFIC
MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,
OF CALIFORNIA,
IS PAID IN,
IN GOLD COIN!!
—AND—
Cost Nothing to be INSURED!

This is Additional Security, Without Cost to the Insured, that the Capital Stock bears its own Interest!

THE PUBLIC CAN ACQUAINT ITSELF WITH the business reputation and standing of the Stockholders and Directors of the Company, and determine from that knowledge whether the affairs of the Company are likely to be honestly and fairly administered for the benefit of the Insured.

POLICIES ISSUED BY THE PACIFIC MUTUAL
ARE NON-FORFEITABLE,
And by the Laws of California,
EXEMPT FROM EXECUTION!

The Company will at any time make AN ADVANCE of Cash on its Policies as future Dividends.
No permits or extra rates required for traveling East or in Europe.
Dividends actually non forfeitable.
Thirty days grace on the payment of all Premiums
After two annual payments the Company will, two years after the last payment, issue either a paid up Policy for the proportion of Premiums received, or pay the equivalent in cash
The rate at which we have been sending money East for Life Assurance will amount, with interest to at least Ten Million Dollars by January 1, 1870. This sum, enormous as it seems, is totally eclipsed by the magnitude of the interest which the Coast is losing for want of it. For instance: Its yield in the East at 6 per cent., compounded annually for ten years, is $6,952,167 27, here at 12 per cent, for four years, and 10 per cent. for six, compounded monthly, $25,690,906 62, or a difference of over eighteen millions!
With these facts in view what Company will likely pay the largest Dividend? The funds of the PACIFIC are all loaned at 1 to 1½ per cent. per month.
Of this large sum it is computed that Oregon and Washington Territory have contributed about one-fourth This involves the sending away annually, to keep up the Premiums on Policies already issued, at least six or seven hundred thousand dollars, which if continued will soon drain the State of all its cash. If to California, it finds its way back here for our productions, a market for which we must look for there.
The applicant need not wait two or three months to know if he is accepted or rejected, but can receive his Policy in less than two weeks, and in case of death the money will be paid to his wife in as short a time.
